City Health at the School of Health Sciences

Relevant, accessible and practical training courses

Welcome

The School of Health Sciences at City, University of London is a world-leading centre for healthcare education and applied healthcare research. We are one of the most established providers of healthcare education in London and are proud of our heritage with a history dating back more than 120 years, to the Schools of both St Bartholomew's Hospital and the Royal London Hospital.

Supportive, Respected, Innovative

City University London is world leader in healthcare education and research. At City Health, we are committed to promoting excellence in our industry and improving outcomes for health service users. For that reason all profits are reinvested in healthcare research and education.

Informed, Current, Responsive

As part of City University London, we are in a unique position to provide contemporary healthcare education. Our staff are world leaders in nursing and midwifery and allied health research which means we are able to introduce newly developed techniques and findings into current teaching.

Flexible, Comprehensive, Bespoke

Generally courses are half or full days to make them as accessible as possible. Professions include nursing, midwifery, radiography, optometry and speech and language. In addition to our published study days, we also create and deliver bespoke training programmes at all levels.
